

Why Be Involved

In excess of 15,000 – 20,000 Nepali women and children (mostly girls) will be the unwilling victims of human trafficking this year. Our partners believe the real stats could be 5 times higher.

Girls will be tricked into migrating out of Nepal chasing the promise of a better life – instead being sold into slavery and abuse.

For many women and children this year – their dreams will turn to nightmares.

Emma* is 20. She was living in very poor conditions and there were no job opportunities where she was from. Emma went searching for work from place to place and a stranger approached and gave Emma hope that he'd find work for her. She eagerly went with him but her dream of work became a nightmare as she was taken to India and sold. Daily physical and mental abuse was inflicted upon Emma. Someone heard about Emma's situation and helped her to run away to a Captivating funded monitoring station where the staff were able to provide Emma with the help she needed. Emma could not return home to her village anymore because of what had happened to her; she was now an outcast. Emma was taken to a transit home and then a safe house where she received counseling, rehabilitation, education and vocational training in skills where she will be able to get a job with a good employer. Do you know what she said after she was rescued?

For indeed that's all who ever have.

An interception at a Captivating funded station involved five different women who were recruited from different districts by a 'broker' promising them high paying jobs in Dubai when in fact they were being sold into slavery. They were stopped by the border staff before entering India, and ended up filing a legal case against their trafficker. About 7% of interceptions involve cases like this where the victims are 'recruited' through semi-organised trafficking networks. There are constant legal cases being fought and often the outcome is a prison sentence for convicted traffickers.
